DEAR 2017 SPRING GRADUATION CANDIDATES:

Congratulations to you, our newest graduates! You did it.

I'd also like to congratulate and thank your families and friends who have anticipated this day – this triumph – with immense pride, as well as the faculty and staff members who have supported you along the way.

I look forward to commencement every year. It is a day to recognize your hard work and perseverance, and also the day I feel most proud to be a member of the MSU Denver family. This year, I am particularly grateful to be a part of the celebration because yours will be my last graduation as president.

As you may have heard, I'll be retiring in June. It has been a special honor to serve as president of this amazing University for the past 12 years. When I first arrived on campus in 2005, I had this big vision – to transform MSU Denver into the preeminent urban university in the nation.

With the support and trust of students like you, we have made great progress toward that goal.

We grew from a college into a university, designed and launched five master's programs, hired faculty from some of the country's most prestigious academic institutions, constructed buildings to enhance student learning as well as revitalize neighborhoods, and in doing so, became a sought-after partner in the community.

We also increased opportunities for nontraditional students and students of color. This year, students of color make up almost 40 percent of MSU Denver's overall student population, and nearly 32 percent of our students are the first in their families to go to college. Our first-time freshman retention rate has risen from 56 percent 10 years ago to 72 percent. And we're working hard to reach our goal of achieving Hispanic Serving Institution status by 2018, meaning that our Latino undergraduate, full-time equivalent enrollment will be 25 percent or higher. We're currently at 24 percent.

These are just a few of the many things we've accomplished together. Today, you become an ambassador of these achievements and our University. When you succeed in your careers and lives, people understand the quality of an MSU Denver education. I am confident you will make us proud.

So, here's to you. The road may have been long and difficult. There may have been some stumbles and falls or some serious roadblocks that stood in your way. There may have been times you felt like giving up. But you didn't. Take a moment to let that sink in, to understand what you have achieved, and let it motivate you on your journey forward.

Please accept my heartfelt congratulations on joining the more than 88,000 Roadrunner alumni who are transforming their communities and our world!

Sincerely,

Stephen M. Jordan, Ph.D.

MSU DENVER: TRANSFORMING LIVES, COMMUNITIES AND HIGHER EDUCATION

Metropolitan State University of Denver continues to make a significant impact on the lives of its students and in the Colorado community.

In the 2016-17 school year, MSU Denver made great progress toward its goal of becoming the preeminent public urban university in the nation. The University launched two new master's degrees – business administration and health administration – that address workforce needs in high-demand professions.

MSU Denver also finalized details on several public-private partnerships that will revolutionize the aerospace and advanced manufacturing industries in Colorado.

Among those was an agreement with York Space Systems, which will bring the company's manufacturing facility and mission operations center to the fourth floor of MSU Denver's forthcoming Aerospace and Engineering Sciences Building. The facility will house York's full engineering and design team, production facility, as well as the center, which will operate spacecraft on-orbit, in real-time. Through this partnership, students will have the opportunity to collaborate on projects and access internship opportunities, part-time employment and work-study programs to launch their careers in the aerospace industry.

MSU Denver also continues to receive accolades for its commitment to being an inclusive community for students from every background and experience. The University was recently recognized as one of 10 Diversity Champion colleges and universities in the nation by INSIGHT Into Diversity magazine and was also ranked as the best college for veterans in the Denver metro area by Military Times.

These achievements are reflected in the University's latest brand audit, which found that the institution's reputation continues to rise among all key audiences, including students, alumni, faculty, staff and local business leaders. The audit, conducted by Corona Insights, found that MSU Denver's brand perception grew from an average of 70 percent positive in 2013 to 76 percent positive in 2016.

The University has also spent time this year celebrating the legacy of President Jordan, who will retire on June 30. Under Jordan's leadership, MSU Denver grew from a local college into a nationally recognized university, established three colleges and one school, launched five master's programs, developed innovative public-private partnerships and constructed buildings that have changed the architectural landscape of Auraria Parkway. The institution was even referred to as the "best urban university in Colorado, if not the country," by Denver's mayor, Michael Hancock.

While Jordan's transformational leadership will certainly be missed, he has laid the foundation for the University to continue on its upward trajectory, moving ever closer toward the goal of becoming the preeminent urban university in the nation.

These are just a few of the most recent successes that demonstrate MSU Denver's commitment to being an agent for change and creating boundless possibilities for students, graduates and the state of Colorado.

ACADEMIC REGALIA

Academic attire is modeled after monks' clothing from the Middle Ages, when college faculty and students were members of religious orders. In England, the faculty of many colleges and universities still wears gowns, hoods and caps in the classroom.

In the early 20th century, colleges and universities throughout the world adopted guidelines for the design and colors of academic regalia. An institution may design and register special attire for its administrators and graduates, but it must conform to certain standards. Once registered, the design and color combination may not be duplicated by other institutions.

The bachelor's gown is most often black and has long sleeves that taper to a point in the back. It is always worn closed.

The gown signifying the master's degree also is usually black, but may be worn open or closed. It features oblong sleeves that hang below the wrist, tapering to a square cut with a cutaway arc.

Although usually black, the doctoral gown is sometimes seen in colors – often gold, purple, blue or red. The gown may be worn open or closed. The opening of the gown is faced with velvet, and three velvet chevrons run across its bell-shaped sleeves. The velvet facing and chevrons may be black or the color representing the graduate's field of study.

The hood varies in length and shape according to the degree it represents: the shortest and smallest signifies a bachelor's degree, and the longest and widest signifies a doctoral degree. The velvet bordering the hood represents the graduate's field of study.

The satin lining of the hood, each a specific design, represents the college or university at which the individual earned his or her degree.

The Oxford cap, or mortarboard as it is better known, completes the attire. Those holding graduate degrees usually wear black tassels on the Oxford cap, but those holding doctoral degrees may wear tassels of gold thread and may also elect to wear a four-sided or eight-sided velvet tam instead of the Oxford cap. Some universities have designated the Cambridge cap – a large, soft beret – for their administrators and those who have earned a doctoral degree at that institution.

At MSU Denver, bachelor's candidates wear colored tassels on the Oxford cap to represent the academic department from which they earned their degrees. Master's candidates wear a hood with the representative color.

In addition to his academic regalia, President Stephen M. Jordan wears the University's chain of office, a visible symbol of his authority as the institution's leader.

ACADEMIC COLORS

Master's Degree Hood Colors

Business (M.P.Acc.) – Drab

Social Work (M.S.W.) – Citron

Education (M.A.T.) – Light blue

Tau Upsilon Alpha (Human Services) – Gold satin stole with royal blue Greek letters TUA, with the chapter name Iota

PRESIDENT'S AWARD RECIPIENT

Chris Escobar

Bachelor of Arts in Political Science

with a minor in economics, summa cum laude

The road that Chris Escobar, recipient of the President's Award – graduating with a 3.99 grade point average and one of the top students in his class – took to MSU Denver has been anything but ordinary. One of Escobar's professors wrote in his recommendation letter for the President's Award, "I have been a professor for 35 years and have taught almost 9,000 students. Very few have made as good an impression as Chris. I do not exaggerate when I say that he ranks in the top 1 percent of all the students I have known." But few know the details of his journey to today's graduation.

He grew up in Denver. His mother is from Washington, and his father and paternal grandparents were Nicaraguan refugees who escaped a violent revolution in the late 1970s. They left behind professional careers and arrived in the United States unable to speak English.

"Both parents started from the bottom and have advanced themselves to have successful careers due to their hard work," he said. They have had a huge influence on him, and he has wanted to follow their example as he studied at MSU Denver and as he is pursuing his own career.

When Escobar became a student at MSU Denver, he felt lucky to be in college. "I barely graduated high school," he said. Getting a degree seemed an unreachable goal.

Motivated, but hesitant about his abilities, Escobar focused his intellect on University studies, decided to test himself by exploring unfamiliar activities, and actively pursued his interests. His leadership ability soon was apparent – a quality emphasized by another professor who nominated him for the President's Award.

Escobar became a political science major with an economics minor. In addition to classwork, he played rugby, wrote for the Met student newspaper, and was one of eight MSU Denver students to attend the Model United Nations assembly in California (as the Latvian representative). He led the team, which won the award in outstanding diplomacy.

He is a member of the National Society of Collegiate Scholars and other organizations.

On top of his course load (winning academic honors) and campus activities, he also has worked part time for a marketing company as an assistant manager in sales and as a law intern, researching court decisions and helping attorneys with deposition preparation. His law firm experience is particularly apt, because he intends to attend law school – a promise he made to his grandfather.

When Escobar dons cap and gown and sits on the commencement podium today, he said he'll be thinking of "those who helped me through it all, such as my family, friends and professors. Each played a different, but vital role."

"It's a huge honor to have been selected for the President's Award," he added. "For me, it's a validation for everything I've done the last four years, growing into the person I am now. I'm eager to embark on my next journey."

PROVOST'S AWARD RECIPIENT

Elizabeth Hubbard Bachelor of Science in Human Services with a concentration in addiction, Summa Cum Laude

When Elizabeth Hubbard graduates today, her accomplishment will be even sweeter because of the challenges she has overcome.

Hubbard hit rock bottom in her mid-20s. “It was a dark time,” she recalls. “I got into drugs and made some bad choices.”

But amid the tumult, she found hope in an unexpected place, in a person she was forced to see as a result of probation – a drug counselor.

She also discovered something else: her purpose.

Ten years later. Seven years clean. Hubbard is an intern at Synergy Residential, a substance abuse rehabilitation program. She works with adolescent boys who choose to get help over going to jail.

The internship is the culmination of her time at MSU Denver, where she is a human services major with a concentration in addiction studies.

“This experience has been a real growth opportunity for me, as a future counselor and as a human being.”

Hubbard’s graduation is an accomplishment that seemed almost unfathomable a decade earlier. And she didn’t just sneak across the finish line either. As the Provost’s Award winner, she has excelled both inside and outside the classroom.

Her 3.98 GPA speaks for itself. But Hubbard has also served as president of two student clubs – the honor society, Tau Upsilon Alpha, and the Human Services Education Organization. Under her leadership, the HSEO won four awards last year.

Hubbard also served as a supplemental instruction leader, facilitating study sessions and learning activities for groups of students, as well as volunteering for organizations across the Denver metro area. And she accomplished all of this, while holding down a part-time job and participating in two practicum field experiences.

Her successes have certainly drawn notice. As Antonio F. Ledesma, Ph.D., associate professor of human services noted in a letter of recommendation: “Liz is one of the best students I have taught in 29 years of teaching on the undergraduate and graduate level. She has tremendous potential to make an exceptional contribution to her clients and to the field of social services.”

After graduation, Hubbard will continue her work at Synergy Residential full time. When she has enough training hours, she’ll become a certified drug counselor.

“The biggest way to help people who are struggling with addiction is just to be there for them,” she says. “My counselor helped me so much. I want to do the same for other people.”
