Society, Identity and Justice

2021-2022 Exploratory Pathway Guide

The Society, Identity and Justice pathway gives students the opportunity to explore societal institutions and various identity groups while thinking critically about human behavior and social forces. Students will develop analytical skills focusing on how people create, maintain and are affected by definitions of race, gender, class, culture and disability and other social locations. Students interested in this pathway will engage in areas such as politics, public services, policymaking, civic engagement, public administration, social advocacy, and law.

Exercise: Identifying Interest Areas

Using the list of majors and concentrations above try to identify 3 to 5 majors you’d like to explore:

- Circle the majors in this pathway that (at first glance) sound the most appealing to you.
- Cross out the majors that you have no interest in at all.
- Are there any majors or concentrations that you haven’t circled or crossed out? Are there any majors that you’d like to learn more about in order to make a decision? Put a star next to those and let your Exploratory Advisor know about these majors.

Exercise: Understanding Requirements
Using the University Catalog’s Academic Program outlines and the general studies outline above, identify any specific general studies requirements that might be required or recommended for the majors you are considering. Record your findings using the strategic planning matrix on page 4.

Things to think about: Are there any commonalities? What are the major differences?

English and Math Placement +
Math and English placement at MSU Denver depend on a variety of factors. Work with your Exploratory Advisor to determine which courses for the Written Communication and Quantitative Literacy requirements are appropriate for you or to determine if you will need additional assessments to place you in the right sequence of courses.

More information on our Math and English Placement policies can be found on the Office of Testing Services website.

Using General Studies to Explore
General studies coursework is one way (of many) to explore your options for a major (and even a minor!). In some cases, majors may have specific general studies “supporting” course requirements which limit the ability to fully explore your options using just general studies requirements. Working with an Exploratory Advisor can help you with developing a strategy for using these requirements to explore your options in a way that is meaningful to you while keeping you on track to graduate within a reasonable time frame.

Check out the 2021/2022 General Studies Guide for a complete list of General Studies options. Be sure to consult with your advisor before registering for classes!

Multicultural and Global Diversity Requirements++
The Global Diversity (GD) and Multicultural (MC) Graduation requirements can be satisfied through the general studies breadth requirements. Courses listed on the General Studies sheet with a (GD) or (MC) notation next to the course title will satisfy one of these two requirements in addition to the general studies category the class is listed under.

Check out the 2021/2022 General Studies Sheet for a complete list of Global Diversity and Multicultural options. Additional Multicultural course options can also be found on the 2021/2022 Multicultural Graduation Requirement Sheet.
Integrating General Studies and Exploratory Courses

When planning your schedule for this pathway you should consider taking a mix of general studies courses and exploratory courses (commonly referred to as gateway courses). Below is a list of recommended exploratory courses to consider. We normally recommend taking 3 general studies classes and 2 exploratory courses with a 15+ credit schedule, 1 exploratory course if taking a 12-credit schedule. Circle the courses that sound most appealing to you. Detailed course descriptions are available in the online University Catalog.
